Heights Garden Club

On the Road Again

Saturday, May 9, at 10 a.m. everyone is invited to the Native Garden and Wildlife Habitat at 3232 Inwood Drive. Brenda Pennington will be our guide for this two-acre private native garden in the heart of River Oaks.

Beginning in 2001, she and Thomas Collins of Urban Gardeners developed and have since maintained this organic garden as a wildlife habitat. There are wooded areas; pond and stream; a pocket prairie; and large numbers of native shrubs, annuals, and perennials. The variety of plants that thrive here provide visual interest year round and become magnificently colorful in the spring and fall seasons. The guided tour begins at 10 a.m. and will last approximately 1.5 hours.

Rose Gardeners

Inwood Native Garden

Only a limited number of visitors can be accommodated on this tour, so RSVP at info@heightsgardenclub.com as soon as possible to reserve your spot.

Saturday, June 13, at 10 a.m. everyone is invited to the Sutter Home Garden at 456 W. 24th Street. Since 2006 Kay and Stacy have transformed a ho-hum landscape to a personal oasis by first removing an unused building and then adding garden beds, decking, and a large koi pond. They love low care plants and lots of color that bring in the bees and butterflies. A few years ago they had an opportunity to take over the lot next door and are in the process of transforming that as well.

As always our tours are free and open to all.

Two green thumbs up

The Heights Garden Club would like to thank everyone who turned out to help spruce up the rose garden on Heights Boulevard and 19th Street just before the home tour. The garden looks fabulous and much better than it has in quite some time.

Status of the Historic District Ordinance Review

The City of Houston Historic Preservation Ordinance, which applies to the Heights area historic districts, was modified by a vote of the Houston City Council in 2010. Since that time there have been some concerns that property owners, builders, remodelers, and citizens interested in historic preservation have had about how the ordinance works in practice. To address those issues, the city established a committee to review the ordinance and to propose changes to it.

The meetings of this "Historic Preservation Review Committee" have ended. For more information on these meetings, and to watch videos of these meetings go here:

<http://www.houstontx.gov/planning/historic-preservation/Historic-Preservation-Ordinance-Review>.

What's next? Margaret Wallace Brown and the Houston Planning & Development office are completing their review of the final report of the committee and expect to have this done by April 17, which will occur during the printing of the May issue of The Heights. At the same time, the city legal department is reviewing the committee recommendations and developing a draft for presentation to the Houston Archeological and Historical Commission (HAHC) and ultimately to City Council. The legal work should complete by the end of April.

This information will be available to the public in a variety of ways: a draft will be on the City's Proposed Ordinance Feedback page (<http://www.houstontx.gov/Proposed-Ordinance-Feedback>), and the draft will be on the Planning Department's Historic Preservation Ordinance Review webpage (see Ordinance-Review link above). A copy of the draft will be sent by email through Citizen-sNet and to everyone who has signed up for email notifications. You can sign up for email notifications at the Ordinance-Review webpage. Margaret Wallace Brown will meet with community and business groups (such as the Houston Heights Association's Land Use Committee on May 4, at 6:30 p.m. at the Heights Fire Station, 107 W. 12th Street at Yale). The city encourages your review of and comments on this proposed revision to the ordinance. Anyone wishing to make comments, or obtain information may contact the department at: Historic.Ordinance@houstontx.gov

While it's not yet scheduled, the HAHC will schedule a public meeting as soon as May. The HAHC may be prepared to vote on the recommendation, with revisions based on the public comment, at their June meeting.

Following that meeting, the Department expects to present the final recommendation to the City Council Committee on Quality of Life and then to City Council for their approval. Based on the timeline outlined here, this could happen in July.

This ordinance is important to property owners and developers in the Heights area and is particularly important to property owners in historic districts. If you need more information on the historic districts within and near the Heights, you can find it on the City of Houston historic preservation web page:

<http://www.houstontx.gov/planning/historic-preservation>

Editor's Note: Thanks to Bill Pellerin, chair, Houston Heights Land Use Committee, for this important update.
